A LITTLE SUFFERER
Cleansed, Purified and Beautified by the Cuticura Remedies.

It affords me pleasure to give you this report of the cure of our little grandchild by your CUTICURA REMEDIES. When six months old his left hand began to swell, and had every appearance of a large boil. We poulticed it, but all to no purpose. About five months after it became a running sore. Soon other sores formed. He then had two of them on each hand, and as his blood became more and more impure it took less time for them to break out. A sore came on the chin beneath the under lip which was very offensive. His head was one solid scab discharging a great deal. This was his condition at twenty-two months old, when I undertook the care of him, his mother having died when he was a little more than a year old, of consumption (scrofula, of course). He could walk a little, but could not get up if he fell down, and could not move when in bed, having no use of his hands. I immediately commenced with the CUTICURA REMEDIES, using the CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP freely, and when he had taken one bottle of the CUTICURA RESOLVENT his head was completely cured, and he was improved in every way. We were very much encouraged, and continued the use of the Remedies for a year and a half. One sore after another healed, a bony matter forming in each one of these five deep ones just before healing, which would finally grow loose and were taken out, then they would heal rapidly. One of these ugly bone formations I preserved. After taking a dozen and a half bottles he was completely cured, and is now, at the age of six years, a strong and healthy child. The scars on his hands must always remain; his hands are strong, though we once feared he would never be able to use them. All the physicians did for him did him no good. All who saw the child before using the CUTICURA REMEDIES and see the child now consider it a wonderful cure. If the above facts are of any use to you, you are at liberty to use them. MRS. E. S. DRIGGS,
May 9, 1885. 612 E. Clay st., Bloomington, Ill.

The child was really in a worse condition than he appeared to his grandmother, who, being with him every day, became accustomed to the disease.

THE EAST.

A Coolness between Cleveland and New York Democrats.

EVENTS IN THE SPORTING WORLD

Argument in the Anarchist Trial at Chicago—Last Day of the Bankers' Convention—Eastern Notes.

NEW YORK, Aug 12—The more the city democratic politicians reflect upon the Magone custom house appointment the less they like it. "If the policy of going outside of New York for men to fill New York offices is to be the rule of action with the president, then," said a Tammany sachem, "the president will have also to go outside of New York if he wants his administration represented in the next state convention or at the election. On the same principle the incumbents of all other special offices here may be got rid of on some pretense or another and their places filled with statesmen from the rural districts, thus practically ostracizing the metropolis. The New York democracy will never submit to this sort of treatment."

Sheriff Grant, a shining light of Tammany, says: "The president studiously ignored us in this business. It remains to be seen how he will get on without us. We care nothing for patronage, but we ought to have recognition. When Cleveland was considering candidates for the collectorship we sent him three or four names and informed him we would send more in case none of these would suit. From that day to this we never even received an acknowledgement of the list, and since then we have simply let Cleveland alone."

Irving Hall statesmen are equally discontented. For the first time in a long while these two chronically discordant factions are in agreement. Friends of the president retort that he can well afford to lose the countenance of both these local factions, whose recognized leaders at this moment are part in the penitentiary and part under indictment.

TEXAS DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION.

GALVESTON, Aug 12.—The third day's session of the democratic convention was a strong one. The committee on permanent organization reported Hon R. M. Wynne of Tarrant county for permanent chairman and Wm Lambert of Travis county for secretary. The report of the committee on credentials was then adopted after a sharp debate, in which the Farmers Alliance and Knights of Labor succeeded in electing their delegation from Cass county. The committee on platform and resolutions reported a platform which after an exciting discussion between the free grass and leased land elements was adopted. The platform upholds the administration of the president, gives pledges that expenditures shall be confined within the revenue, favors an amendment to the judiciary article of the state constitution, favors the best system of education for white and colored children separately but by state not national aid, favors international improvements and development of manufacturing interests, denounces unlawful interference with corporate property, protests against the acquisition of railroad property by foreign companies, opposes consolidation of competing or parallel lines of railroad, favors the making of a comprehensive mechanics' lien law, denounces the convict labor system, declares that members of the party may have what views they choose on local option without forfeiting their rights to be known as democrats, and lastly declares it to be the duty of the government to protect the humblest American citizen against the unlawful acts of any or all nations.

Balloting for governor resulted in the election of Gen L. C. Ross, whose nomination was unanimous. The convention then took recess until 8 P. M.

STANFORD TALKS ABOUT CLEVELAND.

NEW YORK, Aug 12—The World has interviewed Leland Stanford, who said: "Mr Cleveland has not gained much popularity in California. I cannot say that they disapprove of his policy, for they do not know what it is. He does not seem to have outlined any definite course. Our people do not know where to place him, and of course that does not strengthen him much. I do not think he could carry California in 1888. You will see how California stands in the election this fall. Unless all signs fail, the republicans will sweep the state. Cleveland has made a number of very bad appointments in our state, and in my judgment he has lost ground with the people over the country by his pension vetoes. There are about 160 of them in all, and the alleged saving he has made is very small. A few widows have suffered and a few men have been deprived of much needed assistance, but the president did not appear to think of that."

TENNESSEE DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION.

NASHVILLE, Aug 12—Robert L. Taylor was nominated as democratic candidate for governor on the fifteenth ballot.

EASTERN NEWS ITEMS.

CARVER'S VALUABLES SOLD.

NEW YORK, Aug 12—To obtain advances of [illegible] Dr Carver pledged [illegible] with the American Exchange [illegible] the rifles with which he performed his feats and other jewelry and ornaments presented him by various high personages in Europe. He did not repay the loan and yesterday Auctioneer Smyth proceeded to sell the pledges. Thirteen of the doctor's rifles were put up. Eddie Cahill bought three and William J. Kirk, ex-president of the boodle board of aldermen, bid in one of them. Buffalo Bill and some of his men got the rest. Other things sold were a diamond ring given him by [illegible] of Germany [illegible] the Prince of Wales. The ring contained sixty-six diamonds, the center one being at least [illegible] of an inch in diameter. The ring bore the inscription: "Presented by his majesty the emperor of Germany to Dr William F. Carver, Berlin, June 15, 1881." The entire sale brought in about $5,000.

A PROTEST FROM COLORADO.

DENVER, Aug 12—Some Eastern papers have recently published sensational reports from special correspondents which have caused a widespread impression that the grain fields and cattle ranges of Colorado have been devastated by drouth and herds of cattle driven from the state. The chamber of commerce this evening at the regular meeting, after discussing this subject, adopted the following:

Resolved, That the chamber of commerce, through its president and secretary, request that the associated press mail a statement to the effect that the viciously sensational reports which have been published in the Eastern and Southern press that this season has been disastrous to agricultural and stock interests of Colorado are unjustly false and are calculated to work inestimable damage to our state.

THE WISCONSIN FOREST FIRES.

MILWAUKEE, Aug 12—Forest fires in Northern Wisconsin are dying out, material on which to feed having become exhausted. The vicinity of Green Bay is alone subject to danger, but only in the event of high winds. There is much suffering in the devastated region. Hundreds of people are sleeping on the ground with scarcely any covering. Many people have saved naught but their lives and are wandering around with insufficient clothing. Public meetings are being held in various parts of the state to provide immediate relief for the sufferers in the way of food and clothing.

RAILROAD COMMISSIONER JOHNSTON.

OMAHA, Aug 12—Gen Joseph E. Johnston, government railroad commissioner, arrived here this morning and will remain until Saturday evening, when he will start on a general inspection tour of the Union and Central Pacific lines. To-day he went through the Union Pacific shops. To-morrow he will examine affairs at Union Pacific headquarters.

THE MONEY [illegible].

NEW YORK, Aug 12—Banks and trust companies state that they are lending all their money at [illegible] per cent. It was stated to-day that $10,000 was borrowed at call at 40 per cent and not taken by the borrower. He simply paid that rate for one day and did not call for the money.

FOUR MEN DROWNED.

BOSTON, Aug 12—The schooner Arizona capsized in Harbor to-day and four of the five men composing the crew were drowned.

THE ANARCHIST TRIAL.

Zeisler, Attorney for the Defense, Addresses the Jury.

CHICAGO, Aug 12—At the opening of the anarchist trial to-day assistant state's attorney Walker occupied sixty minutes in closing. He said: "The law has been violated and appeals to you. You stand for the first time in the history of this country between anarchy and law, between the absolute overthrow of the present system by force and constitutional law represented by republican institutions. Do not forget the weight of your responsibility, its awful magnitude. The foundation stone of the great public edifice of justice has been attacked. Will it stand erect? Gentlemen, that rests with you. The police have done their duty. They gave their best blood for the law. They stood as men upon command, and they never swerved. Let the jury have the same courage, the same spirit and the same calm fortitude under responsibility. Seven of the policemen are dead, but outraged and violated law shall be redeemed, for in their martyrdom anarchy was buried forever." Walker was followed by Sigmund Zeisler, who occupied the remainder of the day.

THE DEFENSE.

CHICAGO, Aug 12—Zeisler resumed his address in the afternoon. There was a perceptible decrease in the size of the audience. The atmosphere of the court room was oppressive as on every day since the opening of the trial. Zeisler took considerable pains to impress on the jury that the calls to arms referred to by the state were only intended to signify that if employers protected their interests by recourse to arms the working men had a right to protect themselves in the same manner. The social revolution that Spies referred to, said the speaker, is not a revolution to be suddenly consummated by force, but a social revolution which is inevitable. The eight hour movement was a part of the general plan of the revolution, and no one had intimated that this movement was in defiance of law and order. The words "organize and arm yourselves," Zeisler explained to signify "stand by your union. In union there is strength, and the time will come when your strength will right your wrongs. Arm yourselves, organize and stand together, and you will get recognition which will come to you in no other way." What alternative was there when employers said we will use force and papers advocated the use of hand grenades upon refractory wageworkers? This is why they were advised to keep their powder dry.

Zeisler belittled the attempt to turn the Arbeiter Zeitung office into an arsenal. The reporter who testified for the state, he said, had been openly shown a couple of empty shells, a bit of fuse and a few fulminating caps and a couple of dynamite cartridges, and when he returned with two detectives the exhibition was again made. As to the packages of dynamite found in the Arbeiter Zeitung office by the state, the defense had proved that no such package was there prior to the 5th of May, and it afterward transpired that it had been found on another floor of the building.

Zeisler maintained that conspiracy implied secrecy, and there had been no secrecy about the speeches of defendants nor regarding the specimen bombs, fuses and caps found in Spies's office. The speaker created a small sensation when in thundering tones he pointed to the seats of the defendants and said: "If the Haymarket riot is the result of a conspiracy, then Grinnell, state's attorney, is the first man who should be placed there. Next Mayor Harrison and the municipal authorities of Chicago, who have allowed these things to go on, should be tried on the only charge which has any possible hold upon defendants. If the state's attorney, gentlemen of the jury, is not guilty of conspiracy, then you must acquit these defendants of that charge."

Zeisler said to-night that he would finish his speech in about an hour to-morrow morning. He will be followed by Ingham for the state.

PARSONS'S HIDING PLACE.

CHICAGO, Aug 12—Daily News Waukesha, Wis, special: It has just leaked out that A. R. Parsons, the anarchist, made Waukesha his hiding place from the time he left the Haymarket massacre until he returned to Chicago to appear in court. While here he lived with Daniel Horn, pump dealer and recognized leader in the congregation of Simon B. [illegible], who preaches in Parlow's hall. Horn said to an interviewer: "Parsons gave his name as A. R. Jackson. He was reticent and did not talk a great deal. He was a mild, kind hearted man and would not hurt a cricket. He was smart and apparently deep. From a letter received from his wife while here, which I saw, it was evident that he was innocent, for she said she was sorry for the trouble brought about by fools. A week before he went away I knew who he was, but of course did not say anything about it. He worked at the carpenter's trade on a house adjoining his shop and was a good workman."

AMERICAN BANKERS.

Last Day of the Convention at Boston—The Silver Question.

BOSTON, Aug 12—Notwithstanding the extreme heat Horticultural hall was well filled with delegates when the second day's session of the annual convention of the National Association of American Bankers was called to order. Murray of New York was elected president.

Judge Lowell of Massachusetts read a paper on the need of a uniform bankruptcy law and suggested a bill which would provide that salaried supervisory officers be appointed under the government to supervise all bankruptcy cases, just as the insurance commissioner serves.

A communication was read from United States Treasurer Jordan which showed that the number of silver dollars coined to June 30, 1886 was [illegible], estimated value of subsidiary silver $[illegible], a total of $[illegible]. The value of the silver in a standard dollar at to-day's (August 10) price is [illegible], while subsidiary silver is valued at [illegible]. Exclusive of abrasion the present value of the silver coinage is $[illegible].

THE SILVER QUESTION.

The executive council submitted the following report:

WHEREAS, The American Bankers association embraces in its membership men of every political party as well as of those who acknowledge no party obligations. It has in all its conventions carefully avoided all mere party and political questions. Representing as it does the business public as well as customers and stockholders of banks, it again emphatically gives warning of the impending danger to the whole country in the continued [illegible] of silver dollars under the act of 1878. While we fully recognize that both silver and gold are required as money of the land, we believe that neither should be coined in such rate that the other shall be driven out of general use. We [illegible] the idea so often maintained that banks and bankers oppose the continued coinage of silver dollars on account of self interest, but on the contrary we assert that we have no special interest in the [illegible] of coin more than any other class which discharges its legitimate purposes. We believe all persons having limited [illegible] and particularly earners of wages will more acutely suffer when the threatened evils happen. We therefore earnestly appeal to all boards of trade, chambers of commerce and civil and political [illegible] of every kind to make persistent efforts to secure the repeal of the law or suspension of the coinage of such silver dollars.

An additional resolution was adopted reaffirming the resolutions adopted by the convention in [illegible] and further providing that it be strongly urged that the coinage of silver be suspended and that continued efforts be made to secure an international uniform basis of value between gold and silver.

The resolutions offered yesterday in behalf of [illegible] of Ohio were adopted and a committee appointed to take the matter in charge.

The convention then adjourned sine die.

Does the hot weather make you weak and tired? Hood's Sarsaparilla will give you strength.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

Discussion of the Cutting Case in Mexico.

COMMENT BY A LONDON PAPER

The Protestants to Blame for the Belfast Riots—Churchill Preparing a Bill to Solve the Irish Question.

CITY OF MEXICO, Aug 12—Discussion of the Cutting case goes on in the press and among those whom it interests because of the important questions raised, but there is no heat in the discussion. The better class of people hope that the two governments will settle the matter, either by a [illegible] friendly adjustment or through equally friendly arbitration. An interesting question is propounded by a leading lawyer, who asks if Cutting be guilty of libel on both sides of the river, why cannot the supreme court of Chihuahua take judgment for the crime on the Mexican side and hand him to the American side, thus relieving the case of its international character?

The resignation of Gen Jackson, United States minister, is said to be positive, and general regret is expressed by resident Americans. The minister has won the warm approval of all classes by his dignified and prudent course.

The silver question is attracting much attention here. A suggestion has been made that Mexican dollars be exported directly to China. The chamber of commerce is taking an active part in the general discussion of the question.

COMMENT ON THE CUTTING CASE.

LONDON, Aug 12—The Times, speaking of the Cutting case, says: "The chief difficulty in the way of the settlement of the matter lies in Cutting's appeal to the angry passions of the Texans and the desire of dormant raiders on both sides of the frontier for an outbreak which would result in the restoration of the contraband trade. President Diaz of Mexico can have no wish for a collision with his powerful neighbor, and he must be well aware that there are enemies of Mexico on both sides of the frontier who are clamoring for war. Mexico has been surprisingly reasonable in dealing with Cutting, considering the provocation he gave, and although Secretary Bayard has been a little too exacting, the action of the president and the senate is all that could be desired. In that action lies the assurance of peace."

CUTTING AGAIN IN COURT.

DENVER, Aug 12—El Paso special: This evening Cutting was again taken from his prison and dragged before Judge Castaneda's court. He was merely told that the appeal taken in his case by the lawyer who had been appointed for him would be tried by the supreme court of the state of Chihuahua in a few days, and he was asked if he desired to have an attorney to take care of his interests before that court. He replied, as he has always done before, that he did not recognize the jurisdiction of any Chihuahua court, and that he left his case entirely in the hands of the American government. He was thereupon taken back to prison. The Chihuahua authorities continue to ignore entirely the diplomatic entanglements resulting from this case.

A DENIAL.

ST LOUIS, Aug 12—A dispatch from New Laredo, Mexico, says the report sent out from here several days ago stating that 400 fresh Mexican troops had arrived there and that an artillery company had planted guns so as to bear on Fort McIntosh on the Texas side of the river, is false. The dispatch states that no troops have arrived there within a month, that there are 200 soldiers there and that there has not been a cannon of any description in New Laredo in three years.

A REVOLUTION PREDICTED.

ST LOUIS, Aug 12—The Globe-Democrat's correspondent at Brownsville, Texas, says: In an interview to-day Gen Ignacio Martinez, director of the Mundo, a revolutionary organ published here, said there is much dissatisfaction in Mexico, especially in Nuevo Leon and other border states, and that he expects that within two months the country will be in arms against Diaz, as every day his government grows more unpopular among the masses, and at an early day there must be a new regime in Mexico. Private advices from up country states that the revolutionists have captured and hold Moreloes. A dispatch also says that a prominent lawyer from the City of Mexico is in Brownsville to secure the extradition of Martinez in view of the attitude of the United States in the Cutting affair, and that Martinez expresses the opinion that he may succeed.

OPINION OF GEN. SICKLES.

Mexico Longing to be Conquered in Return for American Dollars.

NEW YORK, Aug 12—Gen Dan Sickles, speaking about the Cutting muddle, said: "In comparison with the United States, Mexico is a feeble power and very much inferior in military, naval and financial resources. California and Texas unaided would conquer her. My solution is that she would like to repeat the maneuver of Santa Anna in 1848. Mexico knows that if we take a slice of Chihuahua, Sonora and Lower California we would take territory valuable to us and valueless to Mexico, and that we might do now as we did in 1848, pay Mexico handsomely for territory taken. Public opinion in Mexico would not permit their government to sell this territory by any peaceable transaction. If a conflict be provoked by the Mexicans, and we help ourselves to such parts of their territory as we may want, we could well afford to pay a good round sum, twenty or thirty or even forty million dollars. Such replenishment of the Mexican treasury at this time would enable Gen Diaz and his government to go on very handsomely during the rest of his term of office. Mexico has not the means to pay the army or her civil service and must sell lands. Peaceably this would be impossible. A mob would hang Diaz and his cabinet in the streets of the capital if they sold national territory, but if thirty millions of dollars of gold can be drawn into the Mexican treasury from the United States after a campaign or two, in which we would take possession of Chihuahua, Sonora and Lower California, Mexico would accept the situation as she has done once before."

IRELAND.

THE PROTESTANTS TO BLAME.

NEW YORK, Aug 12—The Herald's Belfast correspondent to-day says: I had an interview with a Protestant magistrate of many years' service in Belfast, and in spite of his religion and social position he said: "I regard the Protestants as entirely in the wrong in this rioting. The Catholics have done their utmost to keep the peace and to prevent exasperation of the Orangemen. The priests at great personal risk and by much exertion have kept the people from resenting insults. Night after night priests have watched until daylight at dangerous points, using the full influence of the church to prevent outbreaks and even resisting the rioters themselves when necessary. The Protestant clergy have not done this. They have made no effort to keep the Protestants quiet. On the contrary the clergy walked in processions and funerals, thus keeping up the bad feeling. The whole trouble has been caused by our system of borough magistrates, which permits men saturated with local prejudices to try criminals, and also impedes the action of the police when quick and sharp action is necessary. There are only eleven Catholic magistrates against thirty-five Protestants, and as a majority of the bench decides, punishment is awarded. The [illegible] has been devoted. I have seen magistrates [illegible] deal out punishment according to the creed with which the criminal lived—a shilling [illegible] six months to another."

The magistrate says further: "The Catholics desire the abolition of unpaid magistrates and the substitution of paid judges responsible only to the law, and free from local and business [illegible], which is perfectly proper. This would likely do away with the great source of chafing between the two [illegible]. The Protestants think it would depend on their friends on the bench, and the Catholics would lose their sense of injustice."

A RAID FOR ARMS.

DUBLIN, Aug 12—While the police [illegible] Killarney [illegible] in search [illegible] of weapons [illegible] seized a quantity of ammunition.

TO SOLVE THE IRISH QUESTION.

DUBLIN, Aug 12—The Irish Times [illegible] states that it is reliably informed that Lord Randolph Churchill is engaged in drafting a bill intended to solve the Irish question. The skeleton of the measure is already drawn, the paper says. [illegible] England, Scotland and Ireland, giving [illegible] and Wales control each of its own immediate affairs, leaving the supreme power of the imperial parliament undiminished. The bill is described as a measure which opens the door to imperial federation. The full text of the bill, the paper says, will not be completed before next February. "But," adds the paper, "so far as it has gone it has been submitted to the Marquis of Salisbury, Marquis of Hartington and others, and is broad enough to satisfy all moderate Irishmen."

WAR LET IT BE.

DUBLIN, Aug 12—The United Ireland says Salisbury's speech at the lord mayor's banquet in London last night was a pronounced war utterance. "The burden of his speech is 'twenty years of [illegible] for Ireland.' Very good," says the United Ireland, "our race is accustomed to this tyranny. War let it be, in the name of God."

SQUIRE AND FLYNN PLEAD NOT GUILTY.

NEW YORK, Aug 12—Messrs Squire and Flynn appeared this morning to enter a plea on the indictments found against them for misdemeanor Monday last by the grand jury. This formality was a very mild affair when considered in connection with the wild excitement which attended their appearance before the same bar two days ago. Judge Cowan presided. Both pleaded not guilty, with the reservation that they might interpose another plea later on if they desired.

The Southern Pacific company have made a rate of $35 to New Orleans, which is $7 50 cheaper than the rate of other overland roads to St. Louis. SUGAR FROM BEETS

Until recently it was asserted with utmost confidence that the beet could not compete with cane in the production of sugar but now it is becoming a question whether the cane can compete with the beet All know that during the past year or two sugar throughout the world has been cheaper than ever before Every inquiry into the cause of these low prices leads to the conclusion that it is the result of vastly augmented production of beet sugar in Europe In France, Germany, Austria, Russia, the Netherlands and Denmark beet sugar establishments have been multiplied and production has been cheapened as well as largely increased under improved methods of manufacture the product of the cane has been almost driven out of the markets of Europe and lower prices than ever before known have prevailed throughout the sugar markets of the world England's great refiners, with all their means of obtaining raw sugars from every quarter of the globe, have been seriously injured in the volume and profits of their business Beet sugar, from Germany and France, is sold in the markets of England at prices almost ruinous to refiners of the product of the cane In all the cane growing districts of the world the planter is also a sufferer from this competition It is, in short, the prime cause of the low prices of sugar in all markets

The fact then, being that the depressed condition of the sugar market is due, not to over production of cane sugar, but to the enormous output of beet sugar in Europe, the question arises whether we have not in the United States facilities for the production of beet sugar equal to those of the European countries whose product has revolutionized the sugar trade of the world

This inquiry may bring us to the point of seeing the pertinency of a brief circular just issued by Mr. E Meeker, of Puyallup, W T, which may be found in our columns to-day It is highly probable that if the sugar beet is to be successfully grown in the United States—and growth of the beet is the real problem to be solved—our Pacific slope is the part of the country where its production can be most successfully carried on

To produce the sugar beet with success requires certain favorable conditions of climate and soil. It is believed that these conditions exist in large portions of Oregon Washington and California. Indeed, this has been proven and therefore it is a fact beyond opinion or conjecture.

There is a beet sugar factory at Alvarado, Cal, which began operations in 187[illegible] and has since produced from 1,000 000 to 2,500,000 pounds of refined white sugar each year Beets grown in Washington territory have been treated at this factory and found richer in saccharine matter than those grown in California, and at the same time found more easy of treatment The climate here is similar to that of the sugar beet producing regions of Europe and there is good reason to believe that our Pacific slope will be at no distant day a great sugar region

The quantity of beet sugar produced in the world already greatly exceeds the quantity of cane sugar The superintendent of the factory at Alvarado, Cal in a recent report says "For centuries mankind has looked to the sugar cane as the source from which to obtain their sugar and until about the first of the present century that was almost the only source from which sugar was obtained It remained for the present century to utilize the beet as an additional source of supply The quality of sugar from both these plants is nearly identical what little difference there is is in favor of the beet. Cane sugar contains more or less glucose—a weak reducing sugar—the beet, when in fresh condition none An acre of beets will produce as many pounds of sugar as an acre of cane, and can be cultivated at as little cost. It requires over a year for cane to mature beets mature in five months, consequently yielding quicker returns The cane has this advantage over the beet, namely, molasses from the cane is valuable for domestic use that obtained from the beet is not."

It is conceded that raw sugar cannot be marketed at San Francisco with profit at 5 cents per pound Raw sugars from the Hawaiian islands cost the refineries at San Francisco about 6 cents. But refined sugar from beets (only white sugar is made from beets there are no second grades and under the patent process no molasses) sells at retail in Germany at 4 cents, or even lower

Such facts indicate that in this country also there is a great future for a great industry Men like Mr Meeker may be called enthusiasts, but they are the pioneers of great revolutions in industry and trade

THE RIGHT KIND OF TALK

The farther we get away from the war the manlier do both sides to it talk At one time so low was public sentiment that Lincoln's Gettysburg speech was dropped out of Appleton's Fourth reader where it originally had a place, and an extract from Rufus Choate substituted At one time the only bit of war poetry in Appleton's Fourth and Fifth readers was an ode written by [illegible] sung on the occasion of [illegible] graves of the confederate dead [illegible] cemetery [illegible] This Con[illegible] worthy of a place [illegible] it was as [illegible] martial or [illegible] but the fact that [illegible] was once the [illegible] readers and the [illegible] speech [illegible] significant [illegible] render [illegible] the flag [illegible] pished [illegible] readers as a [illegible] price of [illegible] literature [illegible] school book [illegible] but [illegible] tion it was [illegible] fathers of the [illegible] poured out [illegible] book publishers [illegible] Harpers before the war when they prepared special editions of school books for the South, from which all mention of slavery [illegible] the peculiar institution was carefully expurgated

This disposition to [illegible] the South and treat the cause of the Union as only worthy to be written in water and wrapped in speedy oblivion, has rapidly disappeared and it is due something to the fact that Grant, Sherman and Sheridan while speaking with entire kindness of the South and its soldiers, never embroidered their public speech with any mixed blue and gray thread of sentimentalism

At one time there was a disposition to run the Army of the Potomac society as a kind of political army tent on wheels for the benefit of the democratic party In 1881 the orator was a "blue and the gray" fiddle player an old New York lawyer in no sense personally identified with the conflict, who never having seen war in all its awful cruelty which makes it a shocking crime on the part of those who force it without solemn and just cause talked about our tremendous tug of life and death as if it was nothing but a basket picnic, or better, a country shooting match where the North having fairly bagged the most game, should generously waive her rights and pay the suppers for the South This orator made the war the subject of a discourse that sounded like an Iliad where, when Troy was captured, Greek and Trojan rushed into each others arms as if they had only been out with an armed party a matter of ten years searching for a long lost brother with a strawberry monogram on his left arm Ulysses had only left home and fought ten years in order to whisper the compliments of the season in the ear of Æneas Agamemnon, king of men blubbers like a school girl over the tomb of Hector, while Menelaus pawns his share of the spoil to pay for masses for the soul of pretty Paris, untimely slain in his effort permanently to break up Menelaus's family. This emetic utterance, played for a pathetic patriotism, was followed by a poem from Joaquin Miller. Now Miller has written some excellent verses, but, as an open mouthed secession editor at Eugene City until the government stamped on him as on a cockroach, he was about as fit to be poet before the army of the Potomac as Lord Salisbury would be at a meeting called to raise money to fill the army chest of the Parnell legion in its next election campaign Salisbury, who has always labored to run the red above the green would hardly satisfy the Parnell party, and in this particular instance Joaquin Miller was true to his colors, for he ostentatiously ran the gray above the line

When at Detroit in 1882 Gen Sickles excited great disgust by asserting that nothing but McClellan's refusal to accept the opportunity kept him from being the military dictator of the nation about the date of Antietam that the army of the Potomac and its officers were ripe for mutiny and anxious to dethrone Lincoln and his administration, replace them with McClellan and then drive the republican congress out of doors at the point of the bayonet, just as Murat at Bonaparte's order dispersed the Council of Five Hundred, or Cromwell the Long parliament. There was danger three years ago that the Army of the Potomac society would become a mere tender to those McClellan democrats who could not see any shorter road to adding a cubit to the military stature of McClellan, Buell, Porter and Rosecrans than by drawing invidious comparisons between these stumbling soldiers and hypercritical patriots and the generals who took their places and made victory "go at the charging step" So much was there of this sort of effort to deck the brows of defeat with the laurels stolen from the brows of the victory compelling commanders of the last year of the war that in 1885 a sterling veteran impatiently said that the Army of the Potomac society was in danger of becoming a mere boozing ken for those disgruntled democrats, who think Sheridan was only a lucky dare-devil, Sherman merely fortunate in his opportunities, and Grant a clumsy boor who reaped what another had sown and gathered where he had not strown The time was when defeat in McClellan was explained by ill luck an act of God, not incapacity while victory was explained by good luck another act of God not capacity The death of Grant, McClellan and Hancock has cleared the air considerably of the disposition to make the Army of the Potomac a place for invidious comparisons between General Ill Luck and General Good Luck between General Debility and General Ability between General Peacock and General Hancock to make it a place for the eructations of rancid sentimentalism about the "blue and the gray" Sherman once curtly said, in comment on this sort of talk "I do not believe it is wise or just to whitewash the rebellion, my own creed is to say to our former foes, 'Boys you did very wrong don't do it again'" And this is always the speech and spirit of Sheridan When Sherman spoke at a public dinner three years ago he uttered the following admirable sentiments

Then came the civil war one of the most causeless foolish wars ever devised by the brain of man We can now look back on it with as much calmness and philosophy as we can on any other past event. We can now see that the causes the early [illegible] and disasters the assemblage of its vast armies the bloody battles sieges and tumults without number and all its woes of complications [illegible] slavery was the pretext [illegible] political ambition the real cause. Though 500 000 precious lives were sacrificed [illegible] millions of dollars were wasted [illegible] devastation and ruin marked the land [illegible] great and astonishing [illegible] slavery has forever disappeared from our country [illegible] of our government [illegible] manhood of our people [illegible] recognized and the minds of our leaders raised to a level with the demands of the age No part of the Union has experienced a larger measure of profit than the section over which we seemingly triumphed I believe that nine out of ten of the soldiers of the South would to-day rather be members of our present glorious Union at peace with the world than citizens of a southern confederacy with slavery the corner-stone and at constant war with their neighbor

PACIFIC COAST SENATORS

An Eastern Estimate of their Ability and Influence

Washington Correspondence of New York World

A prominent Nevadan told me yesterday that it would be impossible to secure a seat in the senate from that state for a less expenditure than $100,000, and it might through a contest be made to cost $200 000 The two seats from Oregon were notoriously controlled by the Northern Pacific railroad The two seats from California will be controlled, as one of them is now, by the Central Pacific Fair and Stanford have less influence in the senate than would be expected from the great fortunes which they control Senator Stanford has been particularly interested in the Los Alamos claim, which covers a large tract of land in New Mexico under an old Mexican grant. Stanford is said to be financially interested in this claim Whether this is true or not, it is a fact that he has done his best to push this claim through the senate so as to get a title to it for the claimants from the United States This claim would have been passed through the senate if it had been referred to the public lands committee but through the influences of Senator Edmunds, of Vermont, it was referred to the private lands claims committee and there it has been rejected, greatly to the disgust of Senator Stanford The rejection of this claim has produced a certain amount of coolness on the part of Senator Stanford toward Senator Edmunds Stanford appears to have better social standing than most of the far Western senators and he probably has more influence in the senate than [illegible] of his western money colleagues His influence [illegible] comes largely from the Central Pacific railroad rather than from the power [illegible] engage He is not likely to play a large part [illegible] of the national government, and [illegible] backers of the republican [illegible] 1888 with the hope of [illegible] at figure in Washington under that [illegible]

Fair is the most conspicuous failure of the [illegible] senate [illegible] Washington [illegible] He is well [illegible] in the first [illegible]

[illegible] Mitchell [illegible] partners they represented the Northern Pacific [illegible] Dolph [illegible] than his associate Mitchell [illegible] has absolutely no standing or influence in the senate beyond that of an individual He was the lobbyist of the Northern Pacific railroad at Washington up to the time of his election to the senate It is the ambition of the Pacific roads to capture all the Western states and territories in the neighborhood of their roads

Politics in the Northern Pacific's Bailiwick

Dayton W T Chronicle

The Northern Pacific strikers at Tacoma will do all in their power to prevail upon the republican convention, which meets at that place September 8, to nominate some man who will be acceptable to the company and who will make the interests of the people subservient to those of that corporation This will not be allowed The Tacomaites are good people, as a rule, enterprising and alive to their best interests, but they must not expect to monkey with the republican party If they want a delegate from the Sound they must unite with other points and not try to force a corporation man upon the party, otherwise east of the mountains will go in with whoop for Tom Brents, and what is more, nominate him!

Southern Oregon Freights.

Klamath Star

The freight rate from East Portland to Ashland has been reduced to $1 per 100 pounds on all classes of freight. This reduction ought to be sufficient to induce the merchants of Eastern Oregon to buy in Portland, and thereby keep Oregon's money in Oregon, and not send it out of the state to build up the trade and popularity of the metropolis of California. We do believe in not only encouraging but in patronizing home industry in every sense of the word and were we a citizen of California we would say the same to that people.

DOWN RIVER

Observations of a Summer Wanderer on the Lower Columbia River—an Employer's Experience—Some Good Country Etc

SKOMOCKAWA W T Aug 12

In the pilot house of the steamer Telephone last Sunday I fell in with Mr William Hume who's name is as thoroughly identified with salmon canning and who is still in the business at his old, bar establishment at Eagle Cliff on the Washington side of the river about thirty five miles above Astoria. Mr Hume is a pioneer in [illegible] not the pioneer I had heard of him often as the only cannery [illegible] on the river who employed white labor exclusively and who never had a Chinaman to [illegible] in any capacity and I [illegible] surprise when after the formal [illegible] he began the conversation [illegible] I think the country owes a debt [illegible] to The Oregonian for [illegible] the Chinese question [illegible] [illegible] he said I have not [illegible] white boys to do my work [illegible] thousand dollars [illegible] a year for twenty years to do this but I [illegible] [illegible] my employees [illegible] [illegible] worked for me on the [illegible] my cannery and [illegible] A day or two later [illegible] some forty or fifty [illegible] [illegible] had been determined [illegible] back the [illegible] [illegible] a body in other words [illegible] Well I am pretty [illegible] a Yankee [illegible] I am like a Frenchman—I always strike first I had made up my mind that I decided to be [illegible] did not intend to be bulldozed or even conferred with about my own business I called my foreman and instructed him to dismiss and pay off every man in the establishment from top to bottom It would not have surprised them more if I had fired a cannon ball through the house but no explanations were made the crew went off and the cannery was locked up The following day I dismissed the foreman and by the boat which carried him away there came a crew of Chinamen Now my cannery [illegible] on altogether by Chinese labor and I intend that it shall be from this time forth During the years that I employed white labor I lost money and I was always in trouble about one thing or other always being bothered by the indolence [illegible] or drunkenness of somebody With Chinamen my establishment works like machinery This is what Mr Hume said in substance and pretty nearly in his exact words He was not talking for print but I take the liberty of making his experience public as a matter of proper public interest. It contains a lesson which workingmen would do well to consider

The salmon season that is the season when the law permits the catching of salmon ended with July but notwithstanding the business of fishing goes on steadily Many nets have been hauled off on account of the light run of fish rather than out of respect for the law Indeed the law is a dead letter It provides that no fish shall be taken after the 31st of July and that during the open season no fish shall be taken from 6 o'clock Saturday [illegible] till 6 o'clock Sunday night This law is a [illegible] one enacted by both Oregon and Washington and it is disregarded alike by the citizens of both states It might be supposed that the cannerymen would be anxious to protect their business but their motto seems to be make hay [illegible] It is [illegible] to explain that at first they tried to live up to the law but one after another broke over and now all or nearly all [illegible] their establishments to suit their own [illegible] the regard to the law or [illegible] principles of prudence The whole difficulty lies in the fact that there is no agreement among cannerymen They have attempted at different times to act together but never with [illegible] or success Individually they seem willing and anxious A speak of the necessity of some [illegible] regulation or practice by which the salmon in the river might be preserved and many would be willing to aid substantially any scheme which looks practicable but when it comes [illegible] each [illegible] a separate way and nothing comes of it It would be an excellent thing, if the cannerymen would hold a general convention this fall [illegible] means for preserving [illegible] There are unmistakable signs that the run is dying out Last year over six hundred thousand cases were put up while this year there were but four hundred and fifty thousand cases

Seining is much more in vogue now than formerly and to a cool eye it is by far the most interesting method of fishing. It has in it a suggestion of the times and occupation of Simon Peter Andrew his brother and James and John the sons of Zebedee Seining has come to be a regular employment on the lower river and the owner of a seining ground anywhere within forty miles of the bar is a fortunate man The process is simple A net several hundred feet long is carried out into the stream To each end a rope is attached and these are pulled in to shore by horses till the net with its captives is stranded It requires almost constant wading in the river by both men and horses and is hard on both I saw a net with twenty fish landed yesterday on the island known as Tenas Illihee opposite this place The efforts of the imprisoned fish to escape made a most interesting sight and no less so the actions of a dog trained by his master to catch such stray salmon as managed to get over or under or through the net This dog will catch a fish of his own weight by the head or neck and bring him ashore safely though he was often severely punished in the endeavor

To the traveler by river the banks on either side appear uniformly mountainous There seems to be nothing but hills covered with forests There is however a great deal of good arable land at the foot of the ridges which nearly everywhere border the river Every three or four miles there is an opening in the hills through which comes a small creek and nearly every one of these has its valley reaching from one to thirty miles inland There are no less than fifty such valleys in the lower Columbia which with the patches of tide land here and there make a rarely fair [illegible] country for small farming and dairying During the last few days I have been able to see something of the valleys of Skomockawa creek and the Elochoman river six miles above These together have as much level and rolling land as is comprised in the Grand Ronde valley in Eastern Oregon or the Rogue river valley in Southern Oregon I have been surprised at the extent and excellence of this country It only lacks [illegible] and ought to have twenty times its present population Water communication with Portland on the one hand and Astoria on the other is easy and [illegible] the climate is unexcelled and all the conditions favorable for the [illegible] and dairy business As this is so now a days [illegible] a farmer of the Elochoman valley [illegible] I believe [illegible] a man [illegible] better [illegible] acres here than six hundred [illegible] Here is a most [illegible]

THE EAST SIDE.

A Thankless Debtor—Special Council Meeting—Chinaman Assaulted—Brief Notes.

City Marshal McMillan commenced suit against T. Fallon in Justice Bullock's court yesterday to recover $25. Fallon became indebted to McMillan in this wise: Several weeks ago the city poundmaster impounded a number of cows belonging to Fallon, and the latter was permitted to take the animals away upon his promising to pay the city marshal the costs amounting to $25, he alleging that he had not the money in hand. The action was a courteous one on the part of McMillan, as he, of course, is holden to the city for the amount; but it seems Fallon's memory is one of brief character and his gratitude of small calibre, and he has failed up to the present to pay the debt, hence the suit. The case came up yesterday, but was postponed till Saturday, the 21st inst.

SPECIAL COUNCIL MEETING

A special session of the common council was held last evening at 8 o'clock for the purpose of considering the Division street question. Mayor Rafferty presided and all members were present except Laing. An ordinance providing for the opening of Division street from Tenth east to the city limits was read first and second times and referred to the committee on ways and means, whereupon the council adjourned. This special action was taken in order that the ordinance may come up at the next regular meeting and be passed according to charter.

ASSAULT ON A CHINAMAN

Several hoodlums entered the Chinese laundry on Fourth street between J and K about midnight on Wednesday and assaulted one of the employes by striking him in the face. The Mongolian blew his whistle lustily, whereupon Marshal McMillan, constable Kerns and officer Atterbury responded and gave chase to the miscreants. The first named officer fired a shot at the retreating scoundrels, but they succeeded in escaping in the darkness.

LOCAL AND GENERAL.

SET FIRE TO CORDWOOD.—C Hansen, who has charge of Greenwood cemetery, sent in word to Coroner De Lin yesterday that some one set fire to a lot of cordwood belonging to Hansen, about eighty cords in all. About 4:30 yesterday afternoon Mrs Hansen saw smoke arising from back of the pasture where the wood was piled, and going there found that a pile of twenty cords had been set on fire in two places and three other piles were on fire. She sent word to her husband, who was out supervising work on the road, and by the time he could get there with help half the wood was destroyed, and he had a hard time to save the rest. There was no fire near the place, so he is confident the wood was set on fire maliciously. Mr Hansen has had trouble with some of the people in the district where he is road supervisor, and the county court was petitioned to remove him. But it was found that there was no cause for such action. It is probable that some of the parties who failed in the attempt to injure him have been guilty of setting fire to the wood. They ought to be severely punished.

HIS UNIFORM DID IT.—Although a policeman has no authority outside of the city limits, still a blue coat and brass buttons strike terror to the heart of country boys even if they adorn only an employe of the Jefferson Street Ferry company. Some time since a skiff belonging to this company was missed by Captain Hackett, and a few days after he heard of such a boat having been seen at Oswego. An employe of the company in all the splendor of his uniform was sent up to look for it. He found that it had been taken a way from the river on a wagon and finally traced it to Sucker lake, where he found it covered with a coat of black paint. He hunted up the boys who had possession of the boat, and when they saw the blue suit and brass buttons they fought in to take the boat, that they had no use for it. The mother of the lads told him to send in a bill for the expense of getting the boat back, and it would be paid, and he came off in triumph and is now a firm believer in the benefits of a uniform, especially one which looks like a policeman's.

NO GARBAGE DUMP.—The question of the disposition of the city garbage seems to be coming to the front again. There was a great deal of trouble about this matter some time since, and numerous exploring expeditions of councilmen were sent out to prospect for "garbage dumps." They appeared to have made satisfactory arrangements, as nothing has since been heard on this score till last night it popped up in the council again. Some scavengers have been making a dump of the city levee and a mass of decaying matter has been dumped there, which is likely to breed a pestilence in the vicinity. Councilman Farrell thinks a notice posted on the levee would keep scavengers away, but this is very doubtful. The arrest and conviction of parties using the levee for a dump will be more likely to have the desired effect. The business must be stopped at once by some means. Parties who have been depositing garbage on the levee know that they have been violating the law, and if they can be caught they should be fined.

O R & N DIRECTORS CHOSEN.—Yesterday afternoon the annual election of the Oregon Railway & Navigation company, which had been postponed from June 21, was held at the office of Ladd & Tilton. The following directors were chosen: Elijah Smith, Christopher Meyer, John H Hall and Colgate Hoyt, New York; Wm Endicott Jr, Boston; Charles L. Colby, Milwaukee; and C H Lewis, H W Corbett, Henry Failing, W S Ladd, D P Thompson, C H Prescott and C A Dolph, Portland. The only changes from last year are Colgate Hoyt vice Brayton Ives, and D P Thompson vice Wm M Ladd. So far as could be learned the election is not significant of any lease or sale to the Union Pacific, or of any change whatever in the management. The new Eastern director, Mr Hoyt, was once one of the government commissioners of the Union Pacific, and is interested in Oregon & Transcontinental, but he is not known as a Union Pacific man. The new board of directors will probably organize to-day.

REDUCTION WORKS AT LAST.—At last reduction works are to be established at Portland. On Monday next articles of incorporation for the Portland Reduction Works will be filed. The capital stock will be $50,000, shares $100 each. The incorporators are Maj W A Jones, G V Z, F Moody, Capt G F Powell, Jacob Kamm, H L Pittock and F I Carel. Prof J T Clayton will act as consulting engineer and mining expert and J M Arthur as secretary. A tract of land has been bought in Stephens addition, East Portland, near the fire works, and operation will begin soon. It is expected, indeed, that the establishment will be ready to begin business in about six months. The works will consist of sampling and test mills, smelter, roasting furnace and assay office, and will be enlarged as business may warrant or require. Ores of every kind will be treated. Capital will also be furnished for purchase or development of mines. It is the intention of the company to push the works right along.

STILL BURNING.—The fire in the hills south of the city is still burning. It started on the west side of the railroad beyond Summit station and crossing the track burned over quite a scope in the direction of the Red house. It is not probable that any buildings were destroyed, as the fire was confined to a tract where logging and cordwood cutting has been carried on. Roadmaster Haber[sett] had a gang of men out watching the bridges on the O & C on Wednesday night and sent out another gang last night. The fire burned to within twenty feet of one of the bridges, where it was checked. Last evening fire had started in several places along in the woods west of E W Bingham's place, and he was at work trying to put it out. As usual no one knows who set the fire out. The sooner the hills in the vicinity of town are free from timber the better, and as it appears that no great damage has been done in this instance, there is nothing to complain of.

LONG TRAIN.—The Atlantic express which left here yesterday consisted of seventeen cars, six of which were Pullman sleepers and one a Worcester excursion car with a Massachusetts delegation. The party came to San Francisco in this car and then had it sent round here by way of Ogden. They go over the Northern to Yellowstone. There was not a Pullman sleeper left in the yard here yesterday, but five are expected in this morning over the Northern and two over the Short Line, and four have been telegraphed for to San Francisco to come round by Ogden. Passengers commenced pouring into the waiting room at Ash street dock about 1:30 yesterday, and there was a constant stream of hacks and hotel coaches driving up from that time till 3 when the transfer boat started. Nearly 300 of the passengers were ticketed over the Northern Pacific for Yellowstone park.

SINGULAR ACCIDENT.—Yesterday's Albany Herald reports an accident at the Oregon Pacific bridge. C H Low, a workman employed at tripping the hammer on the pile driver, was sitting on the small platform used for that purpose when, as the hammer fell, the steel tripping bar caught under the hammer, carrying it downward with great force. The end of the bar struck the unfortunate man, penetrating the flesh near the groin and pinning him fast where he sat. The steel bar passed through a piece of timber five inches thick and stuck several inches into another timber. The helpless man was compelled to remain thus until other workmen came to his assistance and with a saw and chisel cut the bar out of the timber, liberating him. The wound is not considered dangerous.

THE FOURTH STREET BRIDGE.—Roadmaster Habersett, of the west side road, has had a force of men at work for some time renewing the high bridge across Marquam's gulch on Fourth street. They are now at work on the upper tier of bents, which will be completed early next month, and then the bridge will be planked new from top to bottom. The timbers on the top are much longer than before, and a sidewalk five feet in width is to be built on the west side of the track, with a substantial rail on each edge. This will be a great accommodation to people living on the south side of the gulch and will prevent the danger of accidents from people crossing on the bridge.

BIG YIELD.—The yield of grain all over the valley has been very satisfactory to the farmers, and from all appearances the price will be up to the average. Several very large yields have been reported, says the Salem Statesman. Among them comes a yell of triumph from P T Geer, of Macleay, whose facile pen often adds to the enlightenment of the readers of these columns. Mr Geer has just threshed 1[illegible] bushels of clean wheat off the nice sum from thirty-one acres of land, making the average over forty-four bushels per acre. Mr Geer says, "Considering that this was on the sterile soil of the Waldo hills, in a season without any rain for three months, this is nothing to growl about."

DROWNED IN SNAKE RIVER.—On Tuesday evening last Alexander Shearer, superintendent of bridges and buildings for the Northern Pacific, was drowned in Snake river at Ainsworth. For some time he had been engaged in building a crib around a locomotive which went into the river last year, with the intention of raising it. Mr Shearer was standing on the crib when he lost his balance, fell into the river and sank out of sight. The body was recovered in the afternoon and sent to Cheney, where the funeral took place under the auspices of the Knights Templar.

RECEPTION TO-NIGHT.—Department Commander Lamb states that George Wright Post No. 1 has waived its regular meeting to-night and kindly tendered the use of Grand Army hall for an informal reception, to which all members of the Grand Army with their families, members of the Women's Relief Corps and Mexican veterans, whether resident or sojourning, are cordially invited. Gen Sherman will be present and address the assembly. The reception will take place at 8 o'clock this evening at Grand Army hall, corner First and Taylor streets, entrance on Taylor.

FATAL TUNNEL ACCIDENT.—Last Sunday morning an accident occurred in a tunnel under construction near Mitchell's on the Montana Central railroad by which three men lost their lives. A blast had been fired and seven men started to work at the drills. Without warning a block of stone about six feet thick, evidently loosened by the blast, came crashing through the timbered roof, instantly killing John Hayes, Wm M Bush and Samuel Tillery. John Powers was severely injured, but will recover. The three others were bruised, but not severely.

HARVESTING MACHINERY.—The sale of harvesting machinery for this season is about at an end, and dealers in agricultural implements are now filling orders for cider mills and getting their stock of plows ready for the fall trade. The sale of self-binders in the Willamette valley has been very large owing to increased acreage, but the sale of threshing machines has been very small.

The fine globe containing birds now on exhibition in the window of Miss A H Jorgensen, 103 First street, will be raffled at the same place on Saturday evening, at 8 o'clock.

Grimes house, Clatsop, open for the season. Improved by addition, with 30 hard-finished rooms. Terms, $2 day; $10 per week.

FIRE IN EAST PORTLAND

Three Dwellings Burned in McMillen's Addition—Loss $6500

About 11:20 last night an alarm was sounded from Relief engine house in Holladay's addition, followed by a general alarm from the Second ward. An OREGONIAN reporter hastened to the scene of the conflagration in McMillen's addition and gleaned the following facts: The fire originated in the new residence of Mr L G Lincoln, corner of Seventh and A streets, and thence spread to the dwelling house of David Morris across the street, consuming in its course another smaller edifice owned by Mr Morris and occupied by Peter Gard. Mr Lincoln's residence was only partly built, not being plastered. It was a handsome two-story building with a cupola and was one of the finest structures in that part of East Portland. The owner has been a resident of the east side only about three months, having come from Fargo, Dakota. He estimates his loss at $3,000; insurance $1700, of which $1,000 is in the Scottish Union and National and $500 in the Home Mutual of California, Crettz & Linderi, agents. David Morris lost all his household effects and clothing, barely escaping with his wife and children from the flames. He loses $2700; insurance $1400 on residence and $400 on the small house occupied by Gard, placed with the Scottish Union. Peter Gard's furniture was all saved, but he will sustain a nominal loss. Two houses belonging to George F. Wells, corner Sixth and A, were slightly injured. Mr Wells's furniture was all removed to places of safety. Relief hook and ladder company deserves special credit for timely assistance in saving these houses. Mr Wells's loss will reach probably $100. The steam engine from the Second ward was connected with the cistern in Mrs Crea's yard and did effective work. The fire was undoubtedly of incendiary origin. Mr Lincoln states no fire had been kindled in his new house, but he suspected tramps had been sleeping therein for several nights past.

Nelson Olsen, an employe of the O & C railroad ferry, was run over by Pioneer's hose cart. On examining his left leg it appeared that the bone was not broken, but the calf of the leg had burst from the pressure of the wheel, making a large gaping wound from which the blood flowed profusely. He was conveyed to his residence near by and medical assistance was rendered by Dr W L Miller.

SPECIAL COUNCIL MEETING

Contracts Let for Two Street Improvements—The Levee.

A special meeting of the common council was held last evening, Mayor Gates in the chair and Councilmen Farrell, Gallagher, Hacheney, Holland and Woodward present.

REPORTS

From the committee on streets, recommending that the contract for the improvement of Jackson street be awarded to the Portland Macadamizing & Paving company, their bid being $1676.14; adopted.

From the same committee recommending that the contract for the improvement of Morrison street be awarded to the Portland Macadamizing & Paving company, their bid of $5610.20 being the lowest; adopted.

The same committee reported back petition for the improvement of Corbett street from Lane street to Third avenue, recommending that the prayer of the petition be granted; adopted.

NEW ORDINANCES

Authorizing the release of certain real estate held under sale by the chief of police for delinquent taxes; passed.

[The property released consists of lots 1, 2, 7 and 8 in block 29, which had been assessed to M W Fechheimer. The property belongs to Clar A Fechheimer, who is ready to pay the tax, $1.50, on the property being released.]

Mr Hacheney stated that he and Mr Gallagher had made an inspection of the city levee and found that parties had been dumping garbage thereon, which caused a fearful stench in the neighborhood. He was surprised that the police did not look after this matter.

Mr Gallagher moved that the committee on streets be instructed to have the levee leveled off and the nuisance abated as much as possible, and to build a fence to prevent a recurrence of the trouble.

Mr Hacheney thought that if the police would attend to their duties there would be no need for a fence. He thought that the chief of police should be instructed to attend to this matter.

Mr Farrell thought that if a notice was put up on the levee forbidding the dumping of garbage there there would be no more trouble on this score. Adjourned.

Single sculls, junior four-oared, senior four-oared, single working boats, double pleasure boats, swimming race and a ship's boat race open to all ships' crews. If practicable there will also be a double scull race and a race for single pleasure boats.

Entries must be made to the racing committee, of which the club's captain is chairman, before the 21st of this instant.

BRIEF MENTION

James Tenbrooke's funny afterpiece, "[illegible]," at the Tivoli this evening.

Wm Thomas, a hostler, paid $[illegible] fine in Justice [illegible]'s court yesterday for assaulting Wm Corbett.

The residence of Mary Hanlan, at Tangent, burned Monday night with all its contents. Loss $1,000; insurance $400.

Direct shipments of cigars are now arriving from Key West at Walzluski Bros & Co., corner First and Pine streets.

The management of the New Market theater deserve great credit for withstanding the great temptation to leave the orchestra play "Marching Through Georgia" as Gen Sherman entered his box last night.

Some weeks ago Willis Skiff, a merchant of Union, Oregon, disappeared, and it was thought that he had been foully dealt with. It now appears that Skiff owes about $20,000, the greater portion of which is unsecured.

The case of the United States vs. Wong Sang Wa, charged with selling liquor without a license, came up in the United States district court yesterday. The defendant pleaded not guilty, and was tried by the court without a jury and taken under advisement.

The Tillamook Packing Co. are building a salmon cannery on the Nehalem river and will have it in operation about the close of the month, running in connection with the cannery at Tillamook. Hiram Brown and C Leineweber compose the Tillamook Packing Co.

THE STAGE.

NEW MARKET.—Last night "Clothilde" received its fourth representation to a large and fashionable audience. Gen. Sherman occupied the left lower box, which was decorated with the national colors. He was greeted with hearty applause upon his entrance, which he gracefully acknowledged.

To-night "Forget Me Not," with Miss Lewis in her matchless character of Stephanie de Mohrivart, Mr Mainhall as Sir Horace, Miss Williams as Alice Verney and Mr Chappel as Baron the Corsican. The advance sale is large. So great is the demand to hear Miss Lewis that Manager Howe has decided to give one more week instead of taking the company to the Sound. Next Monday "A Desperate Game."

A Suit in Equity Begun against the Water Committee.

J. B. David and Others Ask the State Circuit Court to Restrain the Committee from Selling Bonds.

Yesterday a suit in equity, entitled John B David et al., plaintiffs, vs. the City of Portland et al., defendants, was begun in the state circuit court. The plaintiffs are John B David, David P Thompson and Jacob Kamm, and the following parties are named as defendants: The City of Portland, John Gates, mayor of the city of Portland; J J Holland, H Gerdes, C M Forbes, R H Law, Tyler Woodward, William Pfeidner, Sylvester Farrell, Frank Hacheney and J Gallagher, members of the common council of the city of Portland; John Gates, F C Smith, C H Lewis, Henry Failing, W S Ladd, Frank Dekum, F Fleischner, H W Corbett, W K Smith, J Loewenberg, S G Reed, R P Knapp, L Therkelsen, Thomas M Richardson and A H Johnson, styled collectively the water committee; Henry Failing, chairman, P C Schuyler, clerk, and C H Lewis, treasurer of the water committee.

The complaint would take up about two columns of THE OREGONIAN's smallest type, and recites at length the amendment to the city charter passed by the legislature approved November 25, 1885, creating the water committee and defining its duties and powers. With this for a whereas, the complaint concludes:

And plaintiffs further allege that it is nowhere provided or required in the said act approved November 25, 1885, that the members of the water committee or the members of the water commission mentioned in said act shall give any bond or other security for the faithful performance of their duties as such members of the committee or commission. Nor is it required in said act that the members of said committee or the members of the said commission shall take an oath or affirmation to support the constitution of the United States and of this state, or an oath of office.

That by the terms of said act the duly elected municipal officers of the city of Portland have no authority in or control over the acts and doings of the water committee or of the water commission, either in the construction or purchase of water works or management of the same, nor in the creation of a large bonded indebtedness against the city of Portland amounting to $700,000 as provided in said act.

And plaintiffs further allege that the said act approved November 25, 1885, was not submitted by the legislative assembly to a vote of the qualified electors of the city of Portland for their approval or rejection, nor was the same submitted by the legislative assembly to the common council of the city of Portland for their acceptance or rejection.

That by the provisions of the said act of November 25, 1885, the acts and doings of the said water committee and of the water commission are binding and conclusive upon the city of Portland, and no appeal is by law allowed to be taken by the said city, or by any one in its behalf, from the orders or doings of the said committee or commission to any court of justice for the revision of such orders or doings, however wrongful and oppressive they may be.

And plaintiffs further allege that the defendants John Gates et al., the fifteen persons named in the said act approved November 25, 1885, and therein styled collectively "the water committee," within thirty days from the time said act went into effect, met and organized by the election of the defendant Henry Failing as chairman, the defendant P C Schuyler as the clerk and the defendant C H Lewis as the treasurer of the said water committee. That neither of the said defendants, except the defendant C H Lewis as treasurer, ever gave any bond for the faithful performance of their said duty. Nor did either of said defendants take any oath or affirmation to support the constitution of the United States or of this state, or an oath of office.

That after being so organized the said defendants, styled collectively "the water committee," employed agents, workmen and laborers and entered upon the preliminary steps to construct water works for the purpose of bringing water to the city of Portland, and at an expense of more than $70,000, the amount specified in the said act to defray liabilities already incurred and to be incurred in the prosecution of said work, and they now threaten to make contracts for the expenditure of all the said sum of $700,000 and to issue and dispose of bonds to that amount, and will do so unless restrained by the order and injunction of this court.

And plaintiffs further allege that the defendant, the city of Portland, is now indebted to divers persons in the sum of $400,000, the amount specified and limited in the said act of the legislative assembly approved October 24, 1882, and has no authority to enlarge or increase the said sum of $400,000.

That unless the said defendants collectively styled the water committee shall be restrained by the order and injunction of this court from constructing the said water works and issuing and disposing of the said bonds therefor as the obligations of the city of Portland, the real estate and the personal property of the plaintiff and of all other taxpayers in the said city will become liable to pay a large amount of additional taxation for the interest on said bonds, and to pay the principal thereof when the said bonds become due and payable according to the tenor thereof. And that the plaintiffs will be subject to a multiplicity of actions to recover the taxes so wrongfully to be assessed and collected from them to pay the interest and principal of said bonds.

And plaintiffs further say that they have no plain and adequate remedy at law for the redress of the wrongs herein complained of.

Wherefore plaintiffs pray that the defendant the city of Portland and its officers may be restrained from creating or assenting to the creating of any additional indebtedness of the said city over the amount of $400,000, and that the defendants John Gates, F C Smith et al., styled collectively the water committee, and the defendant P C Schuyler, clerk of the said committee, may be restrained and perpetually enjoined from issuing or disposing of any bonds under or by virtue of the said act approved November 25, 1885.

And that the plaintiffs may have such other or further relief as they may be entitled to in a court of equity.

DOLPH, BELLINGER, MALLORY & SIMON,
JAMES K. KELLY and R. & J. P. WILLIAMS,
Attorneys for plaintiffs.

State of Oregon, county of Multnomah—ss.: I, David P. Thompson, being duly sworn, do say that I am one of the plaintiffs in the above entitled suit, and that the foregoing complaint is true as I verily believe. DAVID P. THOMPSON.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 12th day of August, A. D. 1886. A. L. FRAZER, [Seal.] Notary Public for Oregon.

The case in the course of events will come before Judge Stearns in department No. 2, and whatever may be his final decision there is scarcely a doubt that it will be appealed to the supreme court.

THAT HISTORIC FLAG

PRESCOTT, W. T., Aug. 1[illegible].

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

During the last few years, from time to time, my countenance has been cleft with a broad grin when the press has announced that some Walla Walla man has gone abroad wrapped in an old, faded flag, for which a glorious history is claimed. This flag has done service on one or two occasions: the procession at the meeting of the Oregon Pioneers association, it decorated the train of cars upon which the pioneers of Oregon and Washington territory crossed the continent a few years since. And only a few days ago it was taken to San Francisco to be aired in the procession of the G. A. R. It is claimed for this flag that it was borne through the Yakima Indian war in 1855-6 and numerous other Indian wars since, that there and the mind is led to weave romances around the dear old flag, and fancy battles, bedecks with laurel wreathes the brow of the gallant color-bearer, then a private, who is supposed to have borne the begrimed stars and stripes from victory to victory at the head of company D, First Regiment Oregon Mounted Volunteers. Now the real truth is that the only flag that the company ever bore in battle was captured by the Indians, and afterward devoured by a mule. That mule was never promoted. History is silent as to his fate, and he is

Living, shall forfeit all renown
And doubly dying shall go down
To the vile earth from whence he sprung
Unwept, unhonored and unsung.

But the flag that has just been fluttering in the breeze of the Bay city is, as it were, an impostor, and its history is this: I was made by and under the direction of good old grandma Brown, of blessed memory, at Forest Grove, in the early spring of 1856, and was carried from the Willamette valley to the front by a young man named Billy Burston, arriving at Camp Cornelius in the early days of March. Poor Billy died soon after his return home from the effects of starvation and exposure in the field, and consequently he was never promoted. But this flag never smelt the smoke of battle. We had one or two slight brushes with the Indians after we received it, although the liveliest skirmishes that we had were those in which we were skirmishing around for grub. Then the Indians ran in on our herd of horses and set us afoot, even going to the heartless length of driving off Bucephalus, the bald-faced cayuse horse which our flag bearing brevet colonel was wont to bestride. As this horse was never promoted and is now presumably dead, let me do a little to his memory in the embalming line:

Here lies a glass-eyed cayuse steed—
The noblest of the cayuse breed.
Long and faithful was his service,
But from his fate good Lord preserve us.

About the only bloodshed that this flag ever witnessed was that which flowed from an occasional set-to between some of the boys. Still so long as the outsiders can be deluded into the belief that this is the genuine battle flag, and that the grease spots thereon are all that was left of the Indians we encountered, it will answer the purpose for which it has for years been used, just as well as the genuine flag could have done had not that mule loved the ensign of his country so well as an article of diet. But we, the survivors of the battles that old company D never fought, know that those claims for this flag are bogus.

Building in Portland

Letter in East Oregonian.

The papers keep very mum, but there is more building going on in Portland than at any time since the great Villard boom. A great many prominent corners which contained frame buildings are being removed and fine brick blocks erected in their stead. I took a run over the city the other day, and I was surprised at the number of fine buildings going up in the business portion of the city, yet the papers say nothing. There must be a corner in building.

THE SUGAR BEET INDUSTRY.

A Word to the Farmers of the Northwest on the Subject.

The effort made to enlist capital to establish a beet sugar factory in Washington territory has thus far failed—partly for the reason of the admission of sugar free of duty from the Hawaiian islands, which made intending investors fear a sugar hostile monopoly, built upon the mistaken policy of our government.

Another potent factor, however, in solving this question is the collection of reliable data bearing on the natural advantages of this territory for the ultimate success of this industry, which, once established, so arranged and complete as to convince the most skeptical mind or timid capitalist. The first can be reached only by government aid, the latter problem, however, lies within our own province.

To facilitate this work arrangements have been made to test beets at Puyallup for their sugar producing qualities.

All farmers growing sugar beets in the territory are earnestly requested to send samples of their growth from time to time as the season progresses to Puyallup, where the same will be tested free of charge and a statement of the result sent to the grower. A tabulated statement of all growths tested from all parts of the territory will be sent to each contributor at the end of the season.

It is unnecessary to urge the importance of this work, but I may be pardoned for suggesting the great importance of not neglecting the opportunity here afforded.

Farmers, it lies with you to demonstrate beyond all question the feasibility of establishing, not one, but a hundred sugar factories in our midst, and to build up a far greater industry than any which now exists in the territory, diversifying our interests, populating our territory, increasing our wealth, developing our resources and making our territory the leading sugar producing country of this continent. Address, L. MEEKER,
Puyallup, W. T.

ANSWER TO DR. OWENS-ADAIR.

ASTORIA, Aug. 11, 1886.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

I am glad to see that the possibility of a temperate discussion of the temperance question between women may be proven through your columns, since men generally imagine that women cannot differ in their opinions without quarreling.

If Dr. Owens-Adair were as thoroughly at home in political history as she is in therapeutics she would know that the anti-slavery party neither caused the abolition of slavery nor the war that conquered the rebellion. She would also understand that when the republican party got hold of the reins of the state it was not an abolition party at all. It never claimed to be an abolition party until the persistency and magnitude of the slaveholders' rebellion compelled it to proclaim the emancipation of the slaves, and it could not have succeeded even then but for the desire to be free upon the part of the slaves themselves.

The doctor says truly that when called upon to treat malaria she cannot hope to effect a cure until the causes that produced it are removed. But she forgets to add that the malarial patient is both willing and anxious to be cured, while the saloon element obstinately denies that it is in need of a physician and positively refuses his aid.

The liquor traffic exists in obedience to the law of demand. If it simply existed as a disease like malaria or scabies, from which everybody was anxious to be relieved, it would be an easy matter to stamp it out. But it exists as a mighty and constantly increasing industry, readily commanding fabulous sums of money to fight the prescriptions of your prohibition doctors and employing in the thousand avenues of trade it represents an army of laborers ten times ten thousand strong. To all of these its existence brings bread and butter, and they naturally seek to protect it for this cogent reason.

I freely grant you its cost, and I would to heaven that nobody would consume it, even in a social way. But the vast army of consumers, larger by far than the army of tens of thousands who live directly or indirectly by its manufacture and sale, are not only not seeking prohibition, but are just as obstinately determined not to have it as are the men who sell.

If your prohibition party were employed at the behest of the patient or its allies, or if the patient you seek to cure were willing to be doctored upon any terms, your illustration of the case of scabies would be in order. And so with the teething infant you quote. It may be compared because of the convulsions to a case of delirium tremens, but the parallel ends here. You do not seek to destroy the teeth of the baby to cure the fits, nor would you seek to destroy the man to cure the tremens. You lance the baby's gums to ease the tension and let nature do the rest. You may also prescribe and cure the drunkard if he or his keepers are disposed to put him under treatment. But your attempts to cure him by prohibiting the sale of liquors would be like an attempt to cure a man's innate propensity to kill his fellows by prohibiting absolutely the sale of knives and guns and ammunition.

I would recommend a reversal of your treatment, doctor. Though not professing to be an adept in medicine, the science of politics is my profession, and upon this subject I speak from knowledge. Your medical nostrum of prohibition will not cure the political disease known as "the liquor traffic" because it is not applicable to the case. The fight to be effective must be against liquor drinking. The demand is active, the supply is passive.

If you can induce the drunkard to keep away from the saloon, just as you would induce your patient afflicted with the itch to keep aloof from all contact with those who have it, he would be cured—your work is done. But if your patient clings to the associations that cause the itch from choice, if he obstinately refuses to give them up, though you may heal him for a time in spite of himself, just as surely as he escapes your vigilance even for an hour, you needn't imagine for a moment that he won't catch it again, peaceably if he can, forcibly if he must.

The difference between the methods that divide the temperance workers seems to be this: The prohibition party is seeking to cure a national ill without deference to the desires of the patient, who not only seeks no cure but is determined to accept none. The advocates of liberty, equality and justice for the mothers of the race see in the proposed enfranchisement of women the opening up of such new possibilities for the sex that we shall be in time enabled to control the primal conditions that engender and foster drunkenness. When the mothers of men are equal with the sons of women before the law in everything, they will speedily arise to that condition of financial independence that will endow them with the power to hold men to as strict a line of moral rectitude as they to-day hold their wives and daughters. Men do not dream of forming a political party to keep their wives sober. To propose such an absurdity only provokes a smile. When women are as free politically and financially as men, when they have been free long enough themselves to have reared a generation of freemen, they will have helped good men to establish such healthy political conditions as will make temperance movements unnecessary.

Prohibition can no more carry with it woman suffrage than the tail can carry the kite. "To expect it is to defy the laws of gravitation," says Elizabeth Cady Stanton, with whom politics has been a profession for half a century.

Catharine M. C. Wilkinson, whose hatred of the saloon is certainly orthodox, says: "Are the temperance agitators blind that they persist in shaking the red flag of prohibition at the man's rights bovine, causing it to come full tilt against the equal suffrage cause, backed by its millions of votes and billions of dollars, largely represented by the whisky interest."

Prohibition, being proscriptive in its nature and narrow in its creed, can never assist woman suffrage. Whenever a political agitator favors it as a possible entering wedge to prohibition, the liquor interests, outnumbering it more than fifty to one, take their own two-edged sword of prohibition and with it effectually prohibit woman suffrage, thus proving that prohibition is a double game, with all the odds in favor of the voters who hold the stakes.

Men are so accustomed to making political blunders that nobody expects them to be politically infallible, and there is no earthly power to deprive them of their right of suffrage when they make mistakes. Therefore let them try the prohibition hobby as much as they like. The wise thing for us to do as women is to defer all attempts at making arbitrary laws to govern men, at least until we are free ourselves. The two hobbies of prohibition and liberty (granting for the sake of your illustration that liberty is a hobby) are so widely at variance with each other that you can no more ride them both at once than you can travel east and west at the same moment.

THE OLD POPULAR STAND

Theories are no good. People of this age demand practical demonstrations. Sound resources, progressive institutions, bear abundant fruit. Every thinking person must necessarily be convinced that business firms that buy solely from manufacturers, and do their own importing, are by these identical circumstances better able to make close prices to the consumer than merchants who buy from the jobber and the importer. This is the reason why many struggle hard to hold their own, others lose their grip, and the few grow, in spite of the most adverse circumstances.

This is the reason why A. B. STEINBACH & CO. stand at the head and front of the trade of the northwest.

POINTS OF DIFFERENCE.

Remarks of a Traveler on Puget Sound.

Letter to the Astorian.
ON BOARD STEAMER FANNY LAKE,
PUGET SOUND, Aug. 8, 1886.

Editor Astorian: In an issue of the Tacoma Ledger which fell into the hands of the writer while traveling on board this packet is an article referring to the loss of the Wm. H. Besse, at the mouth of the Columbia a few days ago, and to the criticism upon the part of the Astorian of the Ledger's first sensational publication of that disaster under the flaming head line, "Another Wreck on the Fatal Columbia Bar." Having opportunities of judging relatively the merits and disadvantages of the Sound and the Columbia as harbors and ports of entry fully equal to those of the Ledger, permit me to claim a portion of your columns for my views.

The Ledger claims a proprietorship of the Sound apparently for Tacoma, the most remote from the ocean and the least important of all the real ports of the "Mediterranean of the Pacific." From its steep eyrie overhanging Commencement bay this "guardian of the interests" of the aforesaid Mediterranean swoops down on the wreck of the Besse as a gull might upon a bit of floating carrion; and other similar scavengers from the seas surrounding add their discordant cries to the Ledger's scream as it hovers above the wreck. One might suppose the Ledger a dreary fog whistle sounding its alarm over the Pacific ocean in warning against the entrance to the Columbia.

Your readers will probably search in vain for any mention in the Ledger of the wreck of the Alki, coal laden, which occurred yesterday in the waters of the northern Sound. Four lines in a Seattle daily apprised me of the disaster last evening. This morning's News does not refer to the wreck in any way. Not a line offers an explanation of the accident. If you want particulars you will have to come and get them. The press of Puget sound will not run the risk of publishing them, rest assured. I am glad that the Oregon press faced the circumstances of the Besse's loss with fair and open statements of the facts, let the damage to the commercial interests of ports on the Columbia be as they may.

My knowledge of the loss of the Alki is only the brief paragraph I refer to above. That item states that the vessel, in a smooth sea, ran upon a bold rocky promontory among the northern islands, in the morning. She would be a total loss, the paragraph stated.

If I were inclined to be unfair or malicious in referring to this wreck of the Alki, I might enlarge upon her untimely doom, with her precious freight, wrecked upon cruel rocks in a dangerous strait, driven helplessly by irresistible winds and tide to her destruction, but I know nothing of the character or value of the Alki. I only know that in the daylight, with a deep and sufficient channel, she ran upon a rocky shore and was lost in a sea which I would have navigated safely in my Racine canoe.

Probably the air was foggy or smoky. These arms of the Sound are very likely to be so just now. A year ago a big English vessel which had sailed to the Columbia, up to Portland, and thence safely out again to the sea, across "the fatal bar," was lost on Point Reyes, close to the safe harbor of San Francisco. The circumstance parallels the loss of the Alki—safe waters and all favorable; but the lack of vigilance lost the ship. If that was not the case, then the ship was lost by reason of the unforeseen and unavoidable dangers of ordinary navigation, as the Alki or the Besse may have been.

Yesterday "an unknown, four-masted steamship was ashore on the Jersey sands near New York, sending up rockets signaling for help," but helpless, lost! Shall we say, and will the Ledger say, that New York is a "dangerous port?" Yet it is naturally exactly as dangerous as the Columbia, and not more dangerous than the narrow seas which spread their wonderful labyrinth between Flattery reefs and Tacoma.

Navigation has its dangers everywhere. A stranger attempting to enter the Columbia, drawing twenty-two feet of water, is in peril of the sands, although I have seen this very Besse sail safely in and drop anchor before Astoria wharves. All barred harbors are more or less dangerous; yet the Atlantic coast, from Cape Cod to Vera Cruz offers scarcely one port with as much waterway as the "middle channel"—and those Atlantic ports teem with commerce. Doubtless more tonnage went up the shallow waters of Naranganset bay yesterday to Providence, than into all the ports of the North Pacific coast. Those dozens of Yankee schooners, those magnificent steamers of the Neptune and Fall river lines, and the other craft which swarm upon Naragansett's waters were no safer than they would have been in the Columbia or upon the "bar," or in the sea of Fuca—far less safe, indeed, but for the fact that those rocks, currents and shoals along New England's coast are familiar to the mariners who brave their dangers, while our seas, bays and rivers are unfrequented and unknown. With such a commerce as Boston enjoys suddenly thrown into the waters of Puget sound or the Columbia, there would be a daily shipwreck. At present, with our few vessels, there is an average loss of one annually in the Columbia, and about one every month between Flattery light and Tacoma. The latter statement will stir the Ledger's ire, doubtless, but the records will show, during the last three years, six marine disasters in the safe waters of the straits of Fuca, to one on the bar or in the Columbia waters.

With a safe entrance to the Columbia (which will be an achieved fact soon) the chances of accident on the Columbia or its bar will be less by far than at New York, Philadelphia, Galveston or any other Atlantic port south of Cape Cod.

The Sound and Straits of Fuca have their own peculiar dangers and disadvantages. In the straits, which are wide enough to tempt a vessel to risk sailing in the first hundred miles inland from Flattery, dangerous tides, fierce winds, abrupt shores of projecting rock menace the sailor, when anchors are vainly cast. When the straits are safely passed and Port Townsend is reached another hundred miles of torthous channels stretch away southward to Seattle, Tacoma and Olympia. The two last named cities are as far from the real ports of the north as Portland is from Baker's bay. After a vessel is once inside Sand island she is safe from danger. She may be subject to troublesome delay, may stick for one tide on St. Helens bar or at Swan island, but can suffer no damage to ship or cargo. It is not comfortable to be thus detained, certainly, but it is also quite unusual. I only grant that it may occur; but insist that it need not, and that it is only an annoyance. This is the disadvantage of the Columbia. It will perhaps always exist, as the Mississippi will also make new obstacles continually to the great commerce of New Orleans, situated almost precisely as Portland is with reference to ocean traffic—but "it gets there all the same." Shipmasters know the dangers of both the Mississippi and the Columbia, but they also appreciate the advantage of a "fresh water" berth for a time.

There are upon the island the advantages of deep water and good harbors. With the great depth of water is also the serious drawback of poor anchorage. Nor is the sound all the bottomless pit that it is painted so often, "where the biggest ship afloat can ride at anchor or come to dock." The swift rivers that come in from the glaciers of Mount Rainier and Mount Baker are now all rolling their vast deposit of silt into their estuaries, and Commencement bay, with many other bays into which their rivers run—Stellaguamish, Skagit, Whatcom, etc.—are shoaling awfully. Seattle people say that a wreck which lay on the mud flat at Tacoma a year ago, high and dry at low tide, is now completely buried by the encroaching deposit of the Puyallup river. My own experience in the bay of Utsalady last Monday, when for miles my paddle touched bottom as we crossed from the Skagit in a canoe, is sufficient proof to me of the probable future of many of these bays.

Perhaps Mr. Wright, the patron of Tacoma, will dig out a harbor for that aspiring city when its day shall come, but I fear that he will then have received a "grant" from some now unknown city a hundred miles nearer the ocean, and that Tacoma may be left high and dry to dig out for herself.

Tacoma, according to the Ledger of the issue which calls your paper to question, is "a city of 8000 people, with buildings," (there are six in all) "which would grace a city of twice its size." Really, Tacoma is situated almost precisely as Astoria is, and has no larger a population, not so metropolitan in appearance, and not one advantage over Astoria either as a port or terminus. Its six "buildings which would grace," etc., are entirely the property and colossal advertisement of Mr. C. B. Wright, and but for that liberal and interested gentleman not one of the six creditable buildings referred to would exist—nor would the Ledger. Tacoma would still be New Tacoma, as in 1880, "with its 700 inhabitants," and "Mount Tacoma" would be as it is to the rest of the world, Rainier.

"Vessels sail in and out of the Straits of Fuca without pilots," says the Ledger. Not safely, however. They do, it is true, and so they do, or try to do, into the harbor of Astoria, or into the Columbia—but P. M. S. S. steamers bring their pilots to the Sound just as the O. R. & N. vessels to the Columbia.

To reach Tacoma, a ship should have pilot and tug—be towed in as to Portland, which is half the distance to the seaboard, and 500 miles nearer San Francisco and the trade of the world than Tacoma.

I trust that the "fatal bar" may maintain its present remarkable immunity from accident, and that Fuca Straits may lower its calamitous record of the past three years. I hope to see Seattle in the future, as now, the metropolis of the Sound, for her own enterprising citizens have made her what she is, and in spite of the shameful discrimination by the N. P. R. R. people to her injury, I believe they will maintain Seattle's supremacy. When I next visit the "Mediterranean of the Pacific" (by the way, being the Venice of America yourselves, why not call Young's Bay the Adriatic?) I may travel on one boat which is not a "floating coffin," discharged from the Columbia, as nearly every passenger steamer is, over here.

CURRENT OPINION.

New York Sun: For the sake of gratifying the owners of national bank stock and of winning the favor of devotees of the gold standard the president has set himself in opposition to a majority of the people speaking by the mouth of congress.

Boston Globe: The way to get something done at the next session of congress, beginning in December, is for the people to instruct that body in the fall election just what they want attended to. This was tried with excellent results in 1882.

Boston Advertiser: Now that congress has adjourned the leaders of the two parties are being interviewed as to the results of its labors. It is a remarkable fact that all democrats seem satisfied with what has been done. This is exceedingly strange, as they have not succeeded in doing anything which they advertised in advance would be accomplished.

Minneapolis Tribune: The Chicago News nominates Fitz John Porter for governor of New Jersey. The Minneapolis Tribune hereby places him in nomination as the democratic candidate for president of the United States. Having been a traitor, he would solidify the mugwumps and copperheads of the North, and having aided the rebels as well as he could, he would control the entire democratic vote of the South. Porter and Garland would make a good ticket.

New York World: President Cleveland kills the Morrison resolution by a pocket veto. He leaves it unsigned, without giving any reasons for his action. The idle surplus in the treasury next year, including the $100,000,000 legal-tender reserve over and above liabilities, will probably be more than $210,000,000. While this enormous sum is locked up and withdrawn from use money-lending prospers, the people have to meet the interest on bonds they have a right to call, and the banks enjoy the interest the people pay while their money lies idle.

Chicago Herald: The defense of the anarchists appears to be that in manufacturing bombs and drilling their armed sections they only aimed to kill systems of government. It was not men's lives they were preparing to take, but certain effete policies and customs. By the same token, then, the state of Illinois is not trying these men for their lives, but it is making something of an effort to damage the system which they sought to establish. If it should happen to hang half a dozen of them in the process that would be attributable, perhaps, to the violence of some zealot or crank; the aim would be the same.

PRESS COMMENT.

Philadelphia Times: There is a painful surplus of statesmen who are invincible in spoils and invisible in reform.

New Orleans Times-Democrat: We want to keep our embezzlers at home, in the penitentiary, and to keep dynamiters out.

Pittsburg Dispatch: Many a man who doesn't know what it is to have a surplus is learnedly discussing the proper disposal of the government surplus.

Boston Advertiser: If the suicide of presidential possibilities goes on as fast the next two years as during the past six months, it will certainly be a "new man" in 1888.

Detroit Tribune: President Cleveland is still wedded to his idol, Attorney-General Garland. This does not exactly make him a bigamist, but it makes out to be too big a mistake to be condoned.

St. Louis Post: If postmasters are not permitted to re-elect the congressmen who secured postoffices for them, Ohio politics will soon be reduced to what the late Gov. Allen called "a d—d barren ideality."

Detroit Tribune: It costs a good deal of money to get the country's robbers and murderers behind iron bars, and the sickly sentimentality that is letting some of them out is more than disgraceful. It is outrageous.

Portland and Southern Oregon.

Klamath Star.

Portland is destined ere long to become a great and populous city; that is, if she will reach out and hold that which rightfully and geographically belongs to her. There is in Klamath and Lake counties an immense trade that belong to Portland, and would go there if she would work for it. We know that it will require but small effort and a few hundred dollars on the part of Portland to take the trade there. Remember that it is over 240 miles from Summer and Silver lakes, in Oregon, to the line of railroad in California, and only 140 to Ashland. To the business men of Portland belongs the necessity of doing all things needful to secure the trade of this southeastern portion of Oregon.

WHEAT—Receipts for the week 33 tons valley and 62 tons Walla Walla, against 181 and 2231 tons respectively the same week last year. The small movement, while not a surprise, is not easily accounted for unless it is that sellers refuse to accept obtainable prices. The season is some later than last year but not enough so as to account for the light movement. Shipments to San Francisco have been about 4000 centals by two steamers, believed to be a poor grade of old stock. As far as indicated growers are slow; sellers and buyers evince no hurry. For valley $1 12½ to $1 17½ is quoted by different buyers, but the extreme is necessary to-day. In the interior millers continue to take on basis of $1 17½ here, although more is still reported from some parts for San Francisco shipment. In the Walla Walla grade there is no spot trading, interior business being on basis of $1 07½@1 08¾ for best qualities. There is no figure named for shriveled, of which plenty will soon be offering. The export trade is slow and shippers are not pressed. Foreign markets during the week ruled quiet and without change. The quantity afloat for the United Kingdom is increased to about the extent that for the continent is reduced. English weather remains unsettled and unfavorable to ripening crops. New York and Chicago gain nothing in price, San Francisco options improving to a small extent.

MILLSTUFF—Supply only fair, with no middlings in store. The request is nothing out of ordinary. Quote jobbing values: bran $14@15; chop $22@24; shorts $15@16. Ground barley sells out at $26 and oil meal $32 50.

POTATOES—Oregon in light receipt, dealers paying 1c and selling at $1 10. California sold this morning at $1 40. Sweets more plentiful at 3c.

ONIONS—Good request supplied by California at $1 25 per cental.

FRUITS, ETC.—Oregon apples, if good, bring 50 @60c, and there is a fair request. California lemons sell at $5, the market being bare of Sicily at present. A car from New York should be here early next week. Peaches quoted $1 50 for choice and supplies are light. Tomatoes are $1 50 per large box, and grapes of all kinds $1 10. Cantaloupes sold at $2 50@3 per crate and oranges $4. The above prices are for California stock; Oregon is not offering to the extent expected and realizes about the same prices. The melon trade is irregular, but the best bring $2@2 50 per dozen.

EGGS—Receipts for the week not at all heavy, but the demand failed to take all coming and prices fell to 15c, at which fresh are to-day quoted. Sales to clean up have been made at less. There is continued loss on account of decayed stock.

HAY—Quote best loose $9@10 and old baled $7 50@8 with a very quiet market.

MARKETS BY TELEGRAPH.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—Governments were dull. The stock market to-day was irregular and feverish at times. This was caused by the unequal action of the different forces. The bulls are nervous over the increasing rate for money, and the bears on account of the slowness of the market, toned by unfavorable conditions. The market to-day was affected by purchasers on foreign account, and later by rates for sterling exchange, unfavorable influence of the financial situation, and reports of further damage by drought in the west. There was continued hammering by local brokers throughout the day. Texas & Pacific was a conspicuously weak stock, upon the unfavorable outlook under the new combination for reorganization. Manhattan made a further advance, but business was confined within narrow limits. Prices at the opening showed irregular changes, which were, however, generally within ¼ per cent. of last evening's final figures. New York Central is up ⅝, and Delaware & Hudson and Northern Pacific preferred each ½ per cent. Louisville & Nashville was down ½ per cent. Prices generally declined in early dealings, but for only fractional amounts, which were generally recovered, after which the market remained steady until the afternoon, when a general decline took place, which was checked in the last hour, and the market closed firm on a rally.

The Mail and Express says: Mining shares were dull but strong. Sales: Sutro Tunnel 11, Standard 80, Chrysolite 45@50, Homestake 21@21½, Horn Silver $2 60.

MONEY, BONDS AND STOCKS.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—Money on call ruled easier, ranging from 10 per cent., and closing at 2 @3. Prime paper, 4@5. Sterling exchange, weaker; actual rates, $4 82@4 82½ for sixty day bills, $4 83½ @4 84 for demand.

A Good Name

At home is a tower of strength abroad. This is fully verified by Hood's Sarsaparilla, which has a reputation at home unequalled by any other medicine. In Lowell, Mass., where it is made, whole neighborhoods are taking it at the same time, and the most remarkable unsolicited testimonials are received from Lowell people. The druggists of Lowell say they sell more of Hood's Sarsaparilla than of all other sarsaparillas or blood purifiers. The same wonderful success is extending all over the country, as the superior curative powers of Hood's Sarsaparilla become known. For any affection caused by impure blood or low state of the system, try the "peculiar medicine."
